CIVIL WAR ENDED IN VENEZUELA .- Peace has been restored in Venezuela. The government troops having been defeated and compelled to capitulate in the province of Coro, the partisan leaders were emboldened to attack in force a government outpost at El Valle, near Caraccas, on the 19th of April, where they suffered a defeat and were repulsed, falling back to Coche, where their General, Guzman Blanco, has established his headquarters. After this affair it came to be understood that the federal leader was anxious to be the mediator for peace between his own generalin-chief and the government of General Paez, and at the suggestion of the French and English charge d'affaires a meeting was arranged between him and certain officers of the government. The result of this meeting was the immediate cessation of hostilities and a preliminary agreement of peace, which has since assumed the dignity of a "treaty," ratified by the Council of State, and transmitted for the approbation of General Faloon, who confirmed it, and the war ends.

My duties do not permit me to give your readers as general and comprehensive a description of the Vicksburg siege as I would like to, and to the extent that the important movement demands; still, by adding many little bits of information together, the reader will get a genunty. His eldest son, Maurice, sat for the orough of Tralee; John, said to have been his favorite child, and certainly the only one eral idea of the whole. To no one professional correspondent of Gotham's famous journals among them who had decided ability, was nember for the town of Kilkenny; and the could I recommend my most intimate friend for a faithful and general digest of the deeds and movements of a large army, because man is 1 ot an omnipresent being; he therefore must retail hearsay to a great extent when giving a ounger Daniel sat for the borough of Dundalk. Those which I have particularly examined (through a field glass) have a ditch ten feet

ROBERT MALLORY,

FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1863.

The "sick man" of European politics has been reposing generally quite easily of late, but, having recently turned on his side, his doctors exhibit considerable alarm in reference to the symptoms. It looks as if he had been "playing possum," and, though somewhat debilitated constitutionally, it is clear he has all his wits about him. During his prostration for the last five or six years, he has been dreamily looking at the completion of the Suez canal, upon which France has expended such Herculean labors and nearly completed. But at the eleventh hour, indeed between the very cup of success and the lip of Louis Napoleon, the Sultan has published an Order making the final completion of the work contingent upon certain conditions, which are that the canal shall be neutral like the Dardanelles, that the forced labor system shall be stopped, and that the coal company, a French concern, shall surrender all territorial rights on the banks of the canals. These conditions if accepted will give France an elephant for her share in the great distribution and place an empty sceptre in its grasp. What would avail the canal to France if the Sultan's permission must first be obtained to pass vessels of war through it, or such a check given to French colonization along its McClellan, which the soldiers loudly applaud- cordial anxiety, and that it will be time course, as the surrender of all right of ed. Mr. Foster attacked the speaker, who, in enough for the public opinion of America to territory on the banks, which would of ne- turn, backed by the soldiers, gave Mr. Foster pronounce a definite judgment upon the mocessity exclude the few available springs a dressing from which Mr. F. was only too tives of Louis Napoleon's intervention in Mexof water in that arid country so indispensable to settlers, besides all the more important supplies to be used as feeders to the canal. The importance of this action on the part of the Porte is increased by the certainty that British intrigue and influence have furnished the motive power to upheave the mass. The French newspapers have actually forgotten their selfrestraint, and rail with such bitterness as to show how keenly they feel that a great stumbling-block has been laid in the very path of Gallic oriental interests-laid, too, so suddenly that it has almost crushed the protruding foot which had assumed the seven-leagued boot of progress Indiawards. But while the irritable French twirl their moustaches and | not be "that little long." blow their noses with twangs that reverberate like cannon shot or trumpet clangs, John Bull looks on jollily, rolls his big eyes in his fat cheeks, chuckles at his finesse, draws a firmer, more enjoyable, and deeper draught of his XXX, and thinks what mere slops that French vin ordinaire must be.

We have no doubt that this last stitch dropped by Louis Napoleon in the web of his policy, will prove the most difficult for him to take up on the needles of his destiny. He has planned long and deeply to gain a foothold on the Egyptian isthmus; he wanted but the foothold as he thought soon to give him a permanent position, but now he is brought to a dead lock. The French Canal Company would of course have been a mere passive instrument in the hands of the Emperor, and their schemes of colonization and occupation could have been carried out, and eventually some claim of French citizens would have been established. as a pretext for intervention, forcible seizure. and securing the key to the East. It would seem as if Louis Napoleon's luck had been against him in this affair. The silken cord of the entente cordiale between France and England has received a pretty severe wrenching in this firm parent or parents depending upon his deep game of diplomatic juggling; its strands may untwist and become as brittle as ropes of or more sons of aged or infirm parents subject sand. If so, there may be blows to follow words, but for the present we think the war mother, may elect which son shall be exempt; will be carried on upon paper, and the puppet fifth, the only brother of children not twelve strings will be pulled very carefully, to see how the people like the dance, before the whole programme is developed. There must be much diplomatic knocking of chips from plenipotentiary shoulders and much ambassadorial sparring and saluting before the worst comes to the worst.

Some of the rebel Editors have the habits if not the wisdom of the olden peripatetic philosophers. We all remember the locomotive propensities of the Louisville Courier, Bowling-Green-Louisville Courier and Nashville-Bowling-Green-Louisville Courier, until finally it ran off into infinite space like a comet from its perihelion. The fortunes of the Memphis Appeal have been equally nomadic, having gone through various stages in its flight, dictated we presume by military necessity. From Memphis it went to Grenada, Miss., where it was called the Memphis-Grenada-Appeal; thence it was removed to Jackson and known as the Memphis-Grenada-Jackson-Appeal. On the 14th of May, when Grant captured Jackson, the Appeal, like the steam cork leg, kept moving on, and after a long, dismal, and blank eclipse, it has turned up at Atlanta, Georgia, where it will probably remain until such time as the advancing columns of Rosecrans intimate to the conductors of its columns that another change of air and | the difference between the government and the location will be conducive to its health.

The "act for enrolling and calling out the national forces is leniency itself compared with the conscription law of the Confederacy, which is enforced in the most hellish spirit of unchained demons. It may not be necessary to carry out the requirements of our Enrolment Law; in some States it certainly will not be, and we do not learn that there is any probability that it will be requisite in our State, unless some unexpected emergency should arise, to meet which it is expressly intended. But the Confederate LOUISVILLE, EXY. conscription includes all white male citizens, between the ages of eighteen and fifty-five, who are declared to be actually in the service as soldiers of the rebel army, and if they do not voluntarily come forward, enrol themselves, and bear arms, they are treated as deserters. To enforce this law in our State. whenever the rebels obtain temporary power, crimes are committed which would disgrace vandals, and barbarities before which the redheaded atrocities of savage life seem white as snow. Under our act, however, all to military duty. The exemptions from son of a widow depending upon his labor for support; third, the only son of an aged or inlabor for support; fourth, where there are two to draft, the father, or, if he be dead, the years old, having neither father nor mother, and dependent upon his labor for support; sixth, the father of motherless children under twelve years of age, dependent upon his labor for support; and seventh, where there are a father and sons in the same family and housebold, and two of them are in the military service of the United States as non-commissioned officers, musicians, or privates, the residue of such family and household, not exceeding two, shall be exempt.

All these exemptions, it will be seen, are carefully in favor of the poor and dependent, and show no favoritism to wealth, position, or influence. No law of the character was ever a favorite, and unless human nature changes, there is no probability that such legislation will ever prove acceptable. But in the nation's extremity we must be prepared for the worst, and those who would throw impediments in the way of calling out, arming, and disciplining the militia, may make as many paltry excuses as they can for their conduct, but the candid judgment of all truly loyal citizens must brand them as disloyal.

occupation by the French under Gen. Forey, and the surrender of Ortega with all his army, reach us with such minuteness of detail that we could not doubt the news had it come from any other scene of action. These accounts were published in an extra of the Diario de la Marina of Havana upon the arrival of the French war steamer Darien from Vera Cruz on the 25th ult., and represent that on the 8th Gen. Comonfort, with reinforcements, attempted to relieve Puebla and force his way into it with a convoy of supplies, but was opposed and defeated by the French General Bazaine. In the meantime, General Forey having received his heavy artillery from Vera Cruz, had breached the fort of Totimehuacan, assaulted the city, and entered it on the 17th, capturing Ortega and his whole command of 17,000, with all their artillery and equipments. It is further stated that this success was followed up on the 20th by pushing forward a division of the French army from Puebla for the Mexican capital. Now, while there is an apparent consistency in these dates and details, we cannot resist sharing the impression of the New York Times that the whole affair is an artful and stupendous canard, such as we have almost swallowed on several previous occasions. The reason for this belief is that it is but recently that the time for holding the elections in France was don the Leaguers altogether. NO MAN'S NAME IS MORE INTIMATELY CONnected with the history of the Materia Medica of the United States, or more favorably known as a pioneer in medical discovery, than that of Dr. JOHN of Sars-parilla, has l-ng stood at the head of the varicus conspounds of that valuable drug. His Compound Pectoral of Wild Cherry has become a household word throughout the West and South; and his Worm Lozenges, in less than a year after their introduction, attained a reputation as widespread as the continent of North America. But the crowning glory of his life remains to be attained in his latest discovery, or rather combination, for he does not claim to have been the discoveror of CEDRON, which is the basis of the bitters now offered to the public. That honor belongs to the native inhabitants of Central, America, to whom its virtues have been known for more than two hundred years. Armed with it the Indian bids defiance to the most deadly malaria, and bandles without fear the mst venomous serpents. It is a belie, with them that while there is breath left in the SHORT SUPPLY OF COAL .- The Cincinna i papers are again referring to the very limited supply of coal in that city, which is totally inadequate to the wants of the community. We apprehend that the same trouble will be expressed everywhere in the Valley of the Ohio and Mississippi, as the cause of the scarcity is traceable to the demands of the Government not only for coal, but for the means of conveying it to market. Barges and tugs were pressed into service and taken South to such an extent that it was found impossible to replace them, and, consequently, while the river was up the run of coal was light. Now the stage of water is low, and whatever might be the facilities for moving supplies as regards boats, coal is not obtainable, and, unless there is a rise in the river, there is no hope of adequate relief from the sources upon which our city is mainly dependent for a supply of fuel. The failure of the coal supply at this time will not fall as heavily upon the people directly as at other periods of the year, but there is, nevertheless, danger of distress from the stoppage of manufacturing establishments. In view of this, the Gazette thinks it important that the City Council should inquire into the matter, ascertain the quantity of coal on hand, and the extent to which supplies can be obtained by railroad. In the last great coal famine supplies were obtained by Cincinnati from the line of the Metta road at a cost of twenty-four cents er bushel. On Wednesday eighty thousand bushels Youghiogheny coal in yard at Cincinnati sold at twenty-five cents, and the retail price advanced to forty cents.

Some steps should also be taken in our city to avoid the coal famine which must evidently come upon us, if we do not imitate the prudence of the Egyptian Joseph and lay in a supply in season, or be prepared to run it down with the first rise of water in the autumn We kope it will not be many weeks before General Grant will be able to detach numbers of the barges and tugs from the Government service, so that they may find their way up the river as soon as its stage will permit their ascent. If the retail price of coal has risen in so imaginative as his other works. It con- and saving him as he was about to sink! The Indianapolis Journal of yesterday has the following:

The balance of 4,400 rebel prisoners arrived here about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and were marched to Camp Morton. About 3 o'clock a train of three passenger cars arrived from Cairo with 165 rebel officers on board. They were all taken out and placed in the Soldiers' Home for safe keeping. They will be sent to Johnson's Island, near Sandusky City, Ohio, this morning. These officers are composed of all grades, from Colonel down to Third Lieutenant. There are three Colonels and a few other field officers.

> respondence of the Louisville Journal. AFFAIRS IN EASTERN KENTUCKY. IRVINE, KY., June 2, 1863.

I have just returned from a trip to the counties above here, and I took occasion to visit the camp at Proctor, Owsley county, Lieut. Col. Herd, of the 14th Kentucky cavary, in command, and I must say I was much pleased and gratified to find Col. Herd and his command in good health and spirits. I never observed better order or regulations about any camp, and the men are much pleased with their commander, and do their duties with alacrity and cheerfulness. Col. Herd has entire control of his men; there is no depreentire control of his men; there is no depredation committed on citizens, and the community are all pleased that there is a man in command who does his duty faithfully, while at the same time he protects the inhabitants.

Col. Herd early volunteered in the service of his country. He was 1st Lieutenant in company D, 3d Kentucky Infantry, under Col. T. as a security for the lives of my own men. I then boarded the steamer.

As soon as the boats had got alongside of her, the flames burst out, as I had anticipated. Having had the assurance that there was no danger of her blowing up, I went near enough to the burning ship to lead our hose on board, but all efforts to suppress the flames were unavailing, and by sunset the famous Confeder ate ship Cuba had sunk beneath the waves of the Gulf, in latitude 29:47, longitude 87:40. It is estimated upon reliable authority that the cargo was worth in Havana nearly $400,000, and if landed in Alabama would have been worth $1,200,000, I have her officers and crew on board, and shall deliver them to the authorities of Key West.
